Three Steps To Yes

Stan Uris was sulking again. Rich was watching him and he had been for awhile; on his other side, Mike Hanlon was reading something pretty diligently but Richie was sure he was paying attention. After all, who wouldn't be?

Finally though, Rich couldn't take it anymore.

"Okay, listen, Staniel. I have three steps on how to get Bill to marry you."

Just like he thought, the tips of Stan's ears and his cheekbones burned a light pink. "I don't want him to--!"

"Just shut up and listen to me for a sec!" Rich spoke over him, and he fell silent. "Step one: play truth or dare."

"...okay, I'm gonna have to stop you there." Stan crossed his arms, and this was around the time that Mike looked up, half in interest and half in amusement. For good reason too: he knew Rich well enough to know where this was going.

"Step two," Richie ignored him. "Wait for him to pick dare."

"Stop talking."

"Step three," Richie finished. "Dare him to marry you."

"...you know that might actually work--" Mike started, before Stan screamed.

Maybe not.
